The Caravan

The caravan moved slowly across the dunes as the sun climbed higher, and every traveller kept one eye on the hori-zon.

By noon the camels refused to walk. They pitched the tents in the shade of a ridge and waited for evening.

2